Course Overview

Sustainable finance is reshaping the financial sector. This engaging and modern online course gives professionals the knowledge and confidence to navigate evolving regulation, strengthen client conversations and recognise the opportunities emerging across a changing global economy.

Designed for professionals across banking, trust and corporate services, wealth management, investment management, compliance and family offices, the course combines expert insight with practical learning through eight self-paced online modules.

This course is created and delivered by Andrew Mitchell, a world-respected authority in sustainable finance, Senior Advisor on Nature and Climate Finance to the UN's Environment Programme, Co-Founder of the TNFD and CEO of Equilibrium Futures.

It is CISI Endorsed and CPD Certified.

Content

During the course you will explore:

- The foundations of sustainable finance
- Climate and nature-related financial risks and opportunities
- Sustainable investment principles
- Fiduciary duties and governance
- International reporting frameworks including SFDR (Sustainable Finance Disclosure Regulation) , ISSB (International Sustainability Standards Board) and TNFD (Taskforce on Nature-related Financial Disclosures)
- Practical application across financial services
- Emerging trends shaping the future of finance

Benefits

By the end of the course, you will have a clear understanding of the principles and frameworks underpinning sustainable finance, together with the confidence to apply this knowledge within your role. The course provides practical insight that supports regulatory awareness, client conversations and informed decision-making across financial services.
